Thomas Goger (46) is Deputy Director of the Bavarian Central Office for the Prosecution of Cybercrime since it has been established in 2015. This office with currently 22 prosecutors and several IT specialists supporting them is one of the largest dedicated units in Europe for the prosecution of high-profile cyber cases. Mr. Goger has worked as a local prosecutor and district judge earlier in his career. He has been called upon as adviser to ministries and parliament on various cybercrime related topics. In 2016, he was seconded to INTERPOL's IGCI for a few months. He has appeared as a speaker at and facilitator of various INTERPOL events ever since. He is author of various articles in law journals on asset recovery regarding cryptocurrencies, on CSAM investigations and on MLAT reform.
