

Gina Cabrejo is the acting director of the NAGTRI Center for International Partnerships and Strategic Collaboration. She is an attorney licensed in the United States and Colombia, South America who specializes in diverse areas of law, including finance, banking, criminal prosecution, and management. Given her expertise in inquisitorial and adversarial legal systems, she coordinates domestic and international trainings and facilitates cooperation between the attorney general community and international partners, including government and non-governmental organizations. Gina arranges and hosts international meetings and delegations to provide legal expertise on improving the rule of law and promote justice sector reform.

Prior to joining NAAG, Gina held national positions applying the rule of law and fighting corruption in Colombia. She trained other Colombian prosecutors during the country's transition to its oral accusatory legal system on "Principio de Oportunidad," a type of negotiation settlement. As a government attorney working with the Office of the Attorney General in Colombia, Gina prosecuted complex corruption, tax evasion, financial crimes, and fraud cases. She is an exchange alumnus of the International Visitor Leadership Program. As a private attorney she counseled an investment bank in the merger of two companies.

Gina was born and raised in Colombia, South America. She possesses a master's degree in International Law, LL.M. from Stetson University in Saint Petersburg, Florida. Gina is a member of the Wisconsin State Bar.
